2015 CONFERENCE

Smart City – A New Paradigm in Environmental Management

08 May 2015, Friday
Regal Hongkong Hotel

In an urbanized and developed area, an efficient means of communication would be required to drive and stimulate a sustainable economy. Technological advances in recent years have enhanced the mode of data communication, increasing the performance in many key social areas which in turn create a more sustainable environment and better quality of life for the society. The concept of Smart City depends on technologies and its associated infrastructure, and these are the components that help to drive the growth of the environmental management sector. Smart City, therefore can offer a great deal of opportunities for environmental professionals, including but not limited to the field of air, energy, water, waste, and materials. This conference aims to establish a platform for the experts in these specific areas for sharing local and overseas experience and stimulate initiatives.
